

Entertaining Angels

by Richard Everett

As a clergy wife, Grace has spent a lifetime living in the shadow of her husband Bardolph and what seems to have been forever, on her best behaviour. Now, following the death of her husband she is enjoying the newly-found freedom to do and say exactly as she pleases.

But on the return of her eccentric missionary sister Ruth coupled with some disturbing revelations, Grace is forced to confront the truth of her marriage.

Richard Everett, has come up with that increasingly rare commodity, a boulevard comedy that is both entertaining and affecting.

This is a funny, touching and genuinely thought provoking play which serves to tax us with the questions about faith, loss and just how well we can ever know those we love.
